Society people generally will be interested in the meet, and every effort will be made by those in charge to have the affair prove a success in every sense of the word. The greatest amount of interest is being taken in the project by the racing men of the city, as well as those interested in the sport from a spectator's point of view, and every indication points to the realization of the highest hopes of the committees in charge of the meet.

Largely Attended Meeting Last Night in Baltimore.

POINTS IN THE ADDRESS

A gathering of between four and five housand persons listened to Senator Gorman's speech defending the Chicago platform in Music Hall, Baltimore, last night Senator Gorman walked out upon the stage arm in arm with Senator Morgan of Alabama. Senator Morgan took the place of Senator Faulkner, who couldn't be present. Mr. Archibald H. Taylor was introduced as chairman of the meeting by Congress man Harry Welles Rusk. Mr. Taylor spoke and then introduced Senator Gorman, who

Senator Gorman spoke in part as follows: "Mr. President and Fellow Democrats of Maryland: I would not be frank did I not tell you how much I appreciate this cordial greeting. I would be unjust to you did I not interpret it to mean that it is the only way, for the moment, in which you can express your determination to support the press your determination to support the democratic nominee (applause), and that it is the way that you have of manifesting your approval of one of your party fellows who never turns his back on the foe of the democratic party. (Applause.)

"I lay down the general proposition that no matter which party controls this government, the Union will be maintained, its purity will be preserved, and any party who would act otherwise would be absolutely obliterated. (Applause.)

"That being the case, when an election is over the minority must submit absolutely over the minority must submit absolutely to the control of the majority when that will is expressed. (Applause.) "There is, however, fellow citizens, a vast difference between the parties that seek to centrol your government. The republican party is composed of the followers of Hamilton, and it is in favor of a strong centralized government. We of the democratic few days ago, and the subcommittees appointed last night were but the outgrowth from these two central bodies.

The meet itself, under the particular charge of Mr. Cabrera, will be one of the most successful held here this year, from a racing point of view, as all of the best cracks of the city have signified their intention of entering and competing for the handsome prizes. The financial end of the affair will not be overlooked, however, in the endeavor to make the affair a success from a sporting point of view, and the business men's committee will spare no pains to see that the contribution made to the monument fund from this source is worthy of consideration. party are the followers of Jefferson. (Applause.) We believe in local self-government (applause) and as little interference by federal legislation with the rights of the people in their avocations as is consistent with law and order. (Applause.)

"Now, let no voter suppose for a moment that either of the great parties stands for a single idea. If he attaches himself to a party it must be because, in the main, that party's doctrine suits his ideas of the con-trol and management of public affairs. It is true that at each recurring presidential election some prominent present question is brought to the fore of the discussion, and in many cases the determination of the election is brought about by a single ques-tion. But the other great questions which divide the parties are not dead; they are only laid aside for a moment in the discus-ment fund from this source is worthy of consideration.

The prizes which have, so far been donated for the meet, although the work has just been started, show that a most gratifying amount of interest is being taken in the mect by the merchants of the city. Those already secured include a lady's bicycle suit, by Raner; a Winchester rifle, by Tappan; a stand of silk club colors, by Copeland; a mandolin, by Sanders & Stayman; a gentleman's satchel, by Becker; a gold medal, by Harris; a bicycle suit, by Parker, Bridget & Co., and various articles from Beveridge, Perry's, Cline Brothers, Moore & Leding, Kimon Nicolaides and others. Prizes will also be sent from Chicago, and will be placed on exhibition in a short time. Others will be secured in a short while, and the winners of the different events October 31 will have a varied and rich assortment of articles to choose Parker, Bridget & Co., and various articles from Beveridge, Perry's, Cline Brothers, Moore & Leding, Kimon Nicolaides and others. Prizes will also be sent from Chicago, and will be placed on exhibition in a short time. Others will be secured in a short time. Others will be secured in a short while, and the winners of the different events October 31 will have a varied and rich assortment of articles to choose from.

The business men's committee, which will have charge of the general financial success of the meet, consists of Col. Ed. B. Hay, Mr. Charles Cabrera, Mr. C. A. William, Mr. Sam Steinmetz, Dr. W. A. Croffut, Mr. Percy Foster, Mr. Isaac Gans, Mr. William A. Hungerford, Mr. Kent, Mr. Orrison and Mr. Lewis. The press committee consists of Dr. Frank T. Howe Mr. Mr. S. Chickens will be done of trade.

"In 1832 it was freer trade and the rights of the states against unjust taxation by the McKinley bill and the force bill of Lodge and McKinley. (Applause.)

"In 1836, the contest in which we are engaged now, the great question that has been brought to the fore is the one of currency and the influences of corporation in the control of our elections. (Applause.)

We advocate the election of Bryan and Sewall. (Applause, long and continued.) But we do not support them simply because they are the regular nominees. We support them because they represent the great principles for which the democratic party stands.

(Voices, 'Give it to them. We don't want them.') "I treat all the men who support McKinley and Hobart or Palmer and Buckner a first and second degree republicans. (Laughter and applause, long continued.) The first are the supporters of McKinley, who rera and Mr. Sam Steinmets, and these two gentlemen will prepare the list and issue entry blanks at once. The other committees named at the meeting at the Riggs House last night were as follows: Prize committee—Isaac Gans, George Lewis, George Kent, and Mrs. Cora Bell Brown: advertising committee—W A Hungerhave the courage of their convictions and honor them as American citizens. (Ap-

"The limping, halting, hesitating, cowardly fellows who go only half way can have no respect from anybody. (Applause.) Do I do them an injustice? (Cries of 'No, no; that's right!') Do you want any proof? (Applause.) Do you want any proof that it is all one concern? If you do, turn to their organ, and you will find that there are two branches of bolting democrats in Maryland daughters. (laughter); one that has a committee of seventy and the other that has a committee without number. (Laughter and applause.)
The one supports outright Mr. McKinley, and the other follows that poor old ticket
that was nominated at Indianapolis. (Applause and hisses.)

"Their organs say they have found—I take it in great deliberation—they have found a satisfactory method of working harmoniously for Bryan's downfall, each along its own line. (Applause and laugh-ter.) (A voice, 'They can't do it.') "Now, all these republicans and the men that I have described charge the demo-cratic party with all sorts of crimes. That is nothing new to democrats. (Laughter and applause.) What they have not charged us with in the past I do not know. All the adjectives that have ever been coined to suit the English language have been hurled against us from Jefferson's time until now. against us from Jenerson's time until now.

(Applause.) They do not abuse Bryan any more than they abused Jefferson and Jackson (applause), and yet the democratic party has outlived all its traducers and party has outlived an its tradects and elected its candidates who were thus opposed, and placed their stamp of approval upon the great acts that the democratic upon the great acts that the democratic party have performed. (Applause.)
"Not a single great movement that has tended to elevate the masses or relieve them from unjust legislation or unjust conditions has ever been obtained in the United States except through the democratic party." (Applause.)
After referring to the present industrial and financial condition of the country, Senator Gorman continued:

to be imported in this country. That is a phase of which the American people have already had more than enough, and we will never give them the opportunity to do it again. (Applaume)

"The democratic party says that the present financial system in its entirety is not satisfactory; that it enables a few to be enriched at the expense of the many. (Applause.) Therefore, we say that the currency laws, all of which were enacted by the republicar party, must be modified (applause): that the structure shall be so enlarged that silver shall be used with gold on equal terms at the rate of sixteen to one. (Applause flong continued.)

"Second—The democrats hold that the present tariff shall not be materially disturbed, but that the revenue laws shall be only amended so as to make up the deficiency caused to the decision of the Supreme Court in the income tax cases. (Applause.)

"Third—Feeling as we do, and as is the fact, under the present tariff, there is all the protection necessary to make up the difference between the cost of labor in England or any other civilized country and ourselves, to protect our people (applause), and under it our trade has prospered to a greater extent than it has under any tariff bill since 1877." (Applause.)

Senator Gorman rapidly reviewed the history of silver legislation, the money legislation of the war, and claimed that he republican party was responsible for it all.

islation of the war, and claimed that he republican party was responsible for it all. Referring to the Matthews resolution of 1878 declaring government obligations payable in silver as well as gold, he said: "Now, when the democratic party comes before the people with this history it says we are in favor of doing precisely what the Stanley Matthews resolution said in Hayes' time, and we are in favor of loing it because every republican in Congress, including John Sherman and McKinley, voted for that very proposition. (Great appiause.)

The State Platform.

Senator Gorman then undertook to defend himself from the charge of inconsistency, saving:

"I have been reminded from the public prints from this very stand by an old and valued friend-one whom I shall always esteem, no matter what political course he may pursue, for he has been a noble and faithful democrat and a good citizen of the state—that I supported and advocated resolutions at the state convention from which we sent delegates to Chicago instructing those delegates to support the gold standard. (Laughter.) Oh, no, my friends. The resolutions of the Maryland democracy have always been for the reconvenience. democracy have always been for the money of the Constitution, both gold and silver (Great applause.)

"We proposed, in conformity with the action of the party that dealt with that subject, to be moderate and conservative, to go there and present our views and not take a radical step all at once. But we went there to a national convention that was the court of final resort. We went there, as I supposed, to counsel with our fellows, and present our views, and if we were fairly defeated to submit to the decree of that convention. (Applause.) "Well, there were two-thirds of the democrats that were against the Maryland idea, or, at least, part of the Maryland idea. Ought we submit to a national convention? (A voice: Yes.) Can we keep up a party organization in any other way? Is it not the keystone, the corner stone, of this gov-ernment of ours that the majority, when they have fairly expressed their opinion, must rule?" (Applause.)

Senator Gorman quoted Mr. Cleveland's words in 1892 in favor of loyalty to party. He pointed out that after the passage of the Bland-Allison bill in 1878 eastern pa-pers predicted disaster, and subsequently admitted that prosperity had come. Mr. Gorman declared that the eastern press were just as mistaken now as then.

The Railways. "One-fourth of all the railroads in the United States are, in the hands of receivrs. (A voice: "Give it to Cowen." Applause.). "When the managers of these great cor porations come to us and say we want you to continue the present condition of affairs we reply: Xou have had it for twen-ty-three years and you have bankrupted yourgelves and are trying to bankrupt ev-erybody else. (Applause.) Their opinions on public questions are of no earthly value. on public questions are of no earthly value.

"Take the strongest case there is in the United States. We have it in Maryland. No same man believes that any of the managers of the B. and O. would intentionally cut down its revenues to such an extent as to destroy the value of his stock. It was worth 240; it is worth 14 now. (Laughter.) gestion from politician (laughter), let me say to then that it would be wise for them to become solvent before they pretend to control the finances of a free people. (Great applause and cries of 'Hot stuff' and 'three cheers for Gorman,' which were given.) I com-mend to them that law that is laid down in the Book of Books, that 'No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will hold to the one and despise the other.' (Great applause.) 'Physycian, heal thyself.' (Ap-

"But they say that you are not only repudiators, but that we intend secession (laughter); that we will try to break up the government and destroy the only safety valve we have; that we have attacked the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Why, fellow citizens, can it be that any considerable number of Americans believe that any of the great co-ordinate branches of this government are above criticism by the people? No, no: No matter what views on the finances a man may have, they are on the mances a man may have, they are not above the criticism of the people. "The republicans complain of our criti-cism of the Supreme Court, when they be-gan their life with the criticism of the Sureme Court. (Applause.) No set of men have ever criticised that court more barsh y when its decisions have been against hem than the republican party. The one man who is the great light of that party— and he was a great American, he made that party—Abraham Lincoln, criticised it. Great applause.)

"It is said by the best writers, both American and English, that probably the one weak spot in our government is the fact that the Constitution does not provide against increasing the number of judges of the Supreme Court; that it ought to be cor-rected. Why do they charge us with an attempt of that kind when we have never said anything of the kind, and when cur candidate simply says that he never intended to convey such an idea? It is because the republican party did it themselves. (Great laughter.)

Income Tax.

"Now we come to another decision, re versing the decision of a hundred years in regard to the income tax, another taxing power which was necessary during the war, and the Supreme Court decided that to be unconstitutional. The democratic party now says in a modest way that that was a great outrage, and that as soon as we can, under the Constitution and by legitimate efforts, we will have that reversed; that the decision of the Supreme Court from the day of Marshall down to 1894 shall be re-established as the law of the land. (Applause.) If I had time I would read you what the justices of the Supreme Court themselves say in rendering this decision. One of them, a republican, appointed by a republican administration. ministration, said;
" If this new theory of the Constitution that is, against the income tax-as I be-lieve it to be, if this new departure from lieve it to be, if this new departure from the safe way marked out by the fathers and so long followed by this court, is justified by the fundamental law, the American people cannot too Boon amend their Constitution.' (Applaine.)

"And so say the democratic party. We will stand, my friends, as we have always stood, a party that will guard the rights of the great massed of our countrymen. (Applaine.) We will stand now, as we stood in the war of 1812, when the party said to plause.) We will stand now, as we stood in the war of 1812, when the party said to England: 'You cannot dominate us now.'"

o to the democrats.

The republi-cans say to you, and that is about all they do say, that relief will come to you at once The joint discussion at Greenville, S. C. Wednesday between W. H. Lucas and Harry Skinner, candidates for Congress, and prosperity will be assured if you per-mit them to continue for four years more upon the statute books those laws which came near causing a row and serious trouble. In his closing rejoinder Lucas said: "I have been told here ever is promised in your currency laws by them, unless by some stroke of good fortune some foreign nation, one or more, shall take pity upon the sufferings of their cousins on this side and grant us some great boon that the republicans have not today that ex-Senator Jarvis said he heard Skinner lobbying in Washington in favor of a bill to pay clerks a salary of $100 a month the year through, and fifteen minutes later, on the floor of the House, he made a speech against it and voted against the bill." Jarvis as an infamous and demounced that, using the names of Dr. O'Hagan and Alexander Blow in the same connection. Both these gentlemen were present and instantly resented Skinner's language and compelled him to applicable. There was the wildest excitement for a few minutes.

Big Guns on the Indiana Broke Loose Action of the International Typo-United States battle ship Indiana, at anchor off Tompkinsville, S. I., trying to right the injury which was done to her turrets in the flerce gale of last Monday night, says today's New York Journal. Every "cheese box" on the vessel had gone wrong. The two thirteen-inch turrets had broken their clamp boxes and the eight eight-inch ones sweeping the rails away from the deck and rate against the superstructure.

All the turrets revolve on wheels on a track which is firmly welded to the bar-bette. The barbette is stationary, circular like the turret and firm with the deck. The gunner is able to direct his fire to any point by means of steam. If a full head of steam had been on Monday the turrets would not have been damaged, but it was thought the the clamp box. It is made of steel almost an inch thick on ends and sides, and is hol-low. It has a jaw set with highly tempered teeth. By turning a wheel in the mner section another jaw arises from the fixed barbette and the teeth of the latter dovetail with those of the former. There are several of these combinations on each of the thirteen-inch turrets. This ponderous mass proved too much for the clamp boxes when the ship gave a lurch, and they were crushed. The teeth, thus being released, the turrets rolled on the wheels wherever the preponderating weight of the guns took

The amount of steam on hand was no sufficient to control the machinery, and the only way to prevent disaster was to capture the gune with hawsers and tie them to the superstructure and deck fittings. This was done after hours of work. The eight-inch turrets were fastened by a buckling system, and all the buckles broke.

The officers of the Indiana yesterday praised the work done by Chief Gunner William Walsh, who has been twenty years in the service. While the big gun in the forward part of the ship was lurching to and fro, he stood within the turret at the immediate risk of his life, and coolly directed the work of the men. He possibly saved the Indiana from total destruction. Walsh said yesterday that the ship woul likely go to the navy yard. "She will cer-tainly be fitted with a new system of lock-ing gear," he added. "The damage cannot be repaired in a short time."

It was found necessary yesterday to amputate the right leg of Night Ensign G. S. Galbraith, which was fractured by a battledoor during the gale. The operation was performed in a hospital.

Six district organizers were elected to look after the interests of the International Typographical Union in the sixteen districts into which the United States and Canada are divided.

Philadelphia, Thomas McCaffery of Colorado Springs and J. W. White of Kansas The most moortant item of business transacted by the convention yesterday was the passing of the nine-hour labor law. An effort to pass an eight-hour law was defeated. The nine-hour law has now to be voted on by every typographical union in the country before its final adoption. In 1886 such a law passed the international convention, but was defeated when pre-

He Gives the Reasons for His Belief in a High Tariff.

"I am a protectionist because I believe the protective system is best adapted to our conditions and citizenship. It does everything that a revenue tariff does, and vastly more. It supplies needed revenue. A revenue tariff can do no more, and the present tariff has not done that much. It accomplishes this end with equal, if not greater, certainty than a revenue tariff, and while doing that it wisely discriminates in favor of American interests, and is ever mindful
